- An "Email address" input field with a red arrow pointing to it from the text "Email address".
- A "Password" input field with a red arrow pointing to it from the text "Password".
- A blue button labeled "Join with email" with a red arrow pointing to it from the text "Make your choice".
- A horizontal line with the word "or" in the center.
- A button with the Google logo and the text "Join with Google".

The Image below shows the first screen after joining Vimeo

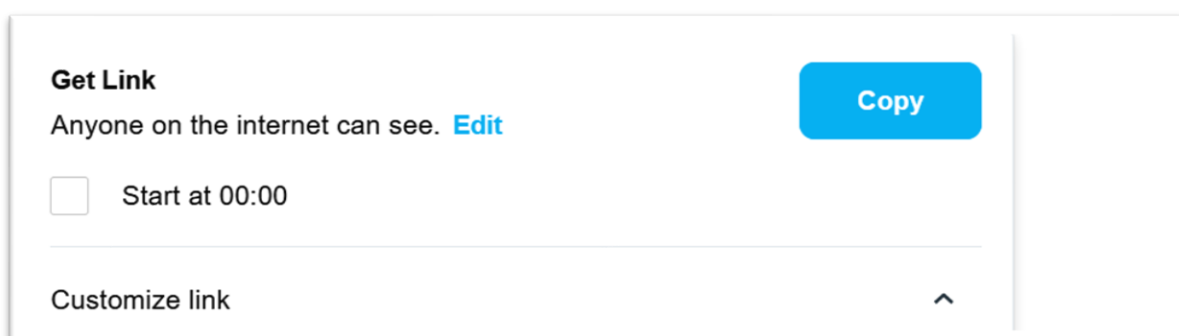

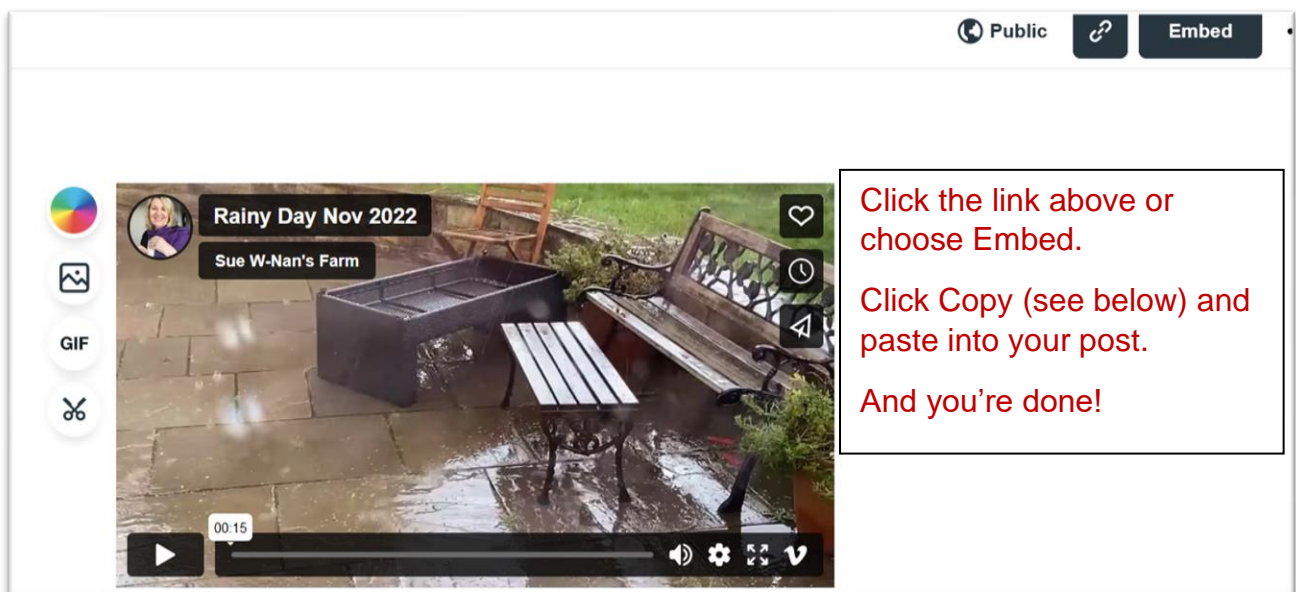

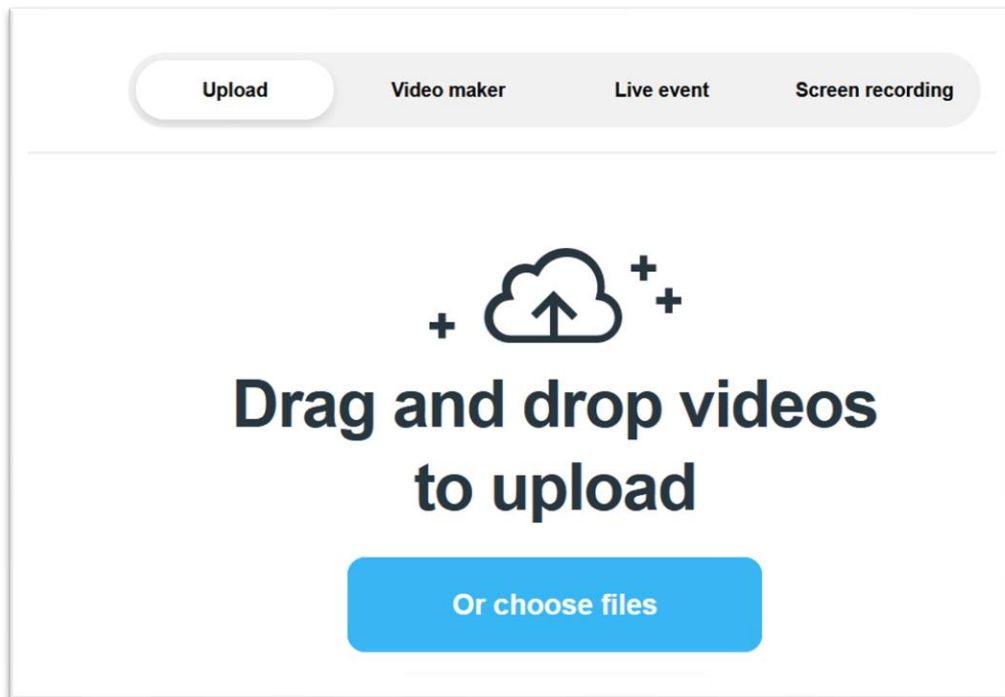

I opened a second account as a new user to show this first screen. The second image on this page shows my usual screen including the area where saved videos appear.

Once your account is created Click New Video to open the menu and upload a video
Alternatively, see below

Navigate to where your video is stored (see the image below) and upload. Depending on its size, the video will take less than a minute to process. When ready it will appear on the Vimeo screen as shown on the second image below.

All done! You're all set to showcase your video on your blog.

When I joined Vimeo a few years ago my free plan included 500MB per week and a maximum total of 5GB. My plan remains in place.

Today the free plan for new users is two videos per month with no cap on the file size.

At the time of writing, Vimeo offers a starter plan - 60 videos per year at £9 per month (check Vimeo prices for your country). Might be worth waiting for offers or promotions such as Black Friday.

If you're looking for more than a video host... Vimeo's free plan offers
